He paused near him. His preoccupied face was so close that for a moment he did not perceive her. He extended his hand to his feet, his face disconcerted by the sudden darkness. Then he murmured: "Oh, Miss Harcourt, and stammered: "You know I am not a thinking of you; I wanted to see you and to tell you that I am not angry. You will not mind me explaining."

"The tide is coming again; not even if the tide is coming in, and not even if the tide is coming in, and not even if the tide is coming in," he said, "I may keep this little flower for myself."

"Will you sit down, just for a minute, and let me explain?" he asked, his large eyes fastened on her in his eagerness.

She seated herself by his side. Judging from a very pretty wedding in St. James's Park, a few months later, Mr. Hamcourt would have been "explained" handsomely.

Minor Blazes.

The fire department was called out yesterday afternoon for a blaze in the residence of P. Rader at No. 323 East Twenty-ninth street, caused by the explosion of a gasolene stove. The fire was extinguished by a chemical engine, the damage being $25 to the house and contents. A telephone alarm at 7:15 o'clock yesterday morning was for a rubbish fire under the Newsboys' Home at No. 833 San Pedro street. The damage was $10.

Boy Badly Hurt.

Charles Hearty, an errand boy employed by the Kingsley-Barnes Company on South Broadway, was treated at the Receiving Hospital yesterday afternoon for what may prove to be a severe injury to his back. He was in the sidewalk basement working on a hand elevator used to lower merchandise, when one of the ropes attached to balancing weight broke. The iron weight of several hundred pounds fell on the boy's back, knocking him down. He was sent to the Receiving Hospital and later to the California Hospital, where he was reported last night in a semi-conscious condition, his temperature being low. He lives at No. 217 Wilmington street.

A Gorgeous Landscape.

A few friends had a view of J. Bond Francisco's latest painting last evening at his studio in the Blanchard Building. It is a reproduction of one of the most elusive things an artist may attempt, caught in a cañon of the total country, and a marvelous reproduction of a wondrous scene. The artist's coloring of the reflection of the sunset glow faintly gleams in the sea, as faithful as it is gorgeous; while the fading light upon the more distant summits is managed with a subtlety of atmosphere of which a lesser genius might well despair. The impressionistic coloring of the picture is so well adapted to such a radiant theme! One can see far into this superb cañon, can almost see the lord of day behind the granite range, and can almost believe that the sun is looking four or five minutes for a crimson and purple afterglow will give place to the sable of evening right there before his eyes.

Coroner's Latest Row.

Both Coroner Holland and E. H. Broese of the firm of Broese Bros., declare that the Herald's statements relative to their squabble over the possession of the corpse of A. E. Ball, were greatly exaggerated. They say no loud language was used, nor violence of any kind, and that as soon as the Coroner found he could not remove the body from Broese Bros' place, he withdrew. Dr. Holland, however, admits that he is not friendly with the Broese family, because they worked against him politically when he was elected, and he says that the firm is the only one he has trouble with in carrying out what he considers his "official rights." When the body of Ball was found Monday afternoon he had ended his life, the people with whom he lived requested Broese Bros. to take charge of the remains. In the evening Coroner Holland, with his deputy and a representative of Broese Bros., visited the Broese morgue for the purpose of having the corpse removed to the other undertakers. Broese Bros. refused to relinquish claim to the remains, and the body stayed there. This is only one of a series of such unseemly quarrels that the freaky Coroner of this county has had.

"INSURANCE OF NATIONS."

President Schurman of Cornell Says America's Mission in the Philippines is Educational.

BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A. M. 1 NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—At the fourth annual dinner of the Life Underwriters' Association of New York last night President Jacob G. Schurman of Cornell University spoke on "The Insurance of Nations." He said in part:

"Some people believe that the more a nation has, the happier it is. If their logic is correct the nation that overruns the world reaches the climax of human perfection. What constitutes the soul of a nation? What is its goal? Do we make the republic greater if we cross the Pacific and annex a piece of China? Do we make the nation any safer and more secure? If not, what do we do? What insures our country, I believe, is a common nationality, a common religion, and common interests. In spite of the steady stream of immigrants that has poured into the United States, this republic has retained a common nationality and the interests of one part of the country are the interests of another."

"We have not gone to China. I hope we shall not. I expect that those who do will, in the course of a generation or two, encounter an interesting Nemesis. By partitioning China, we do not divide her people. They will remain homogeneous and acquire mechanical arts, and their independence, and I believe, acquire a belief in the country as wisely in leaving China to the Chinese. I do not believe that this country, by the annexation of the Philippines, has increased its power or security. Sovereignty is not possession, but responsibility. We have annexed, not great advantages, but grave responsibilities. I believe that we are in the Philippines for their sake, not ours. Our mission there may be regarded as educational."

President Schurman thought it necessary to have a large army in the East in order to impress the oriental mind.
